OUTLOOK FOR COMPACT MUCH MORE HOPEFUL

French Obligations Due Soon to United States Likely to Influence Decision

PARIS-Japanese advocacy of general acceptance of the plan of reparations settlement offered by Owen D. Young, chairman of the committee, has made a deep impression. Japan's direct interest in money returns from German payments is infinitesimal compared to that of the Allies, but it is because of this impartial position that the prompt plea by Japan's chief delegate, Kengo Mori, carried so much weight.

At a late meeting on May 4 Mr. Young announced that Germany was ready to fulfill-conditions of the plan provided the Allies were also in accord and provided arrangement could be made for cessation in part of payments in case difficult eco-nomic situations arose at any time in Germany. Mr. Mori followed and presented strong arguments in favor of

One Danger to Be Averted It is difficult to believe that the delegates will go back on Mr. Mori's elucidation of the advantages of a joint agreement, however disappointing certain features of the plan may appear to principal creditors. One danger, it is declared, must be averted. Criticism of Americans has already revealed it. This is another splitting of the experts into two camps, but this time with Americans and Germans on one side and chief creditors on the other. But impartial observers declare that nothing could be further from the ruth than that the Americans have etrayed the Allies or that they ave "gone over" to the Germans.

American experts, seeing the im-asse, took counsel alone, when over, alone, all phases of the situation, in-cluding allied needs and German economics. With these facts the Americans drew up new figures which they felt Germany could subscribe to without imperiling its fiscal position and which the Allies night fairly be asked to accede to for the general good of everyone

Not a "German-American Plan"

The new plan is not a "German-American plan" as some newspapers have described it but purely American. American indorsement is too a factor to be disrega in Ripon that the Republican Party many to carry out the plan. It is regarded as tantamount. #### JUGOSLAVIANS HAD LOOKED FOR TAX REDUCTION

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR BELGRADE, Jugoslavia-The new budget of Jugoslavia, which the Minister of Finances has recently made public, has caused surprise and disappointment because it is 8 per cent larger than the budget of last year. It has often been stated that the former Jugoslav governments, made up of politicians seeking place and power, were extravagant and inefficient, and ft has been frequently repeated that one of the advantages of the new dictatorial regime will be that it will not have to spend money to appease politicians or parties, and that therefore it will be much more

In consequence, the people of increased from 11,500,000,000 dinars to nearly 12,500,000,000.

It is divided into two parts: 7,500,000,000 for administrative purposes and the rest for state enter-prises, such as the railroads. The increase in administrative expendi-tures goes largely to the supreme government and to the Ministries of Finances, Justice and the Police. This seems to some people significant and typical. They say that it is natural for a despotic government to spend much money on policemen and detectives, on courts and on the gov-ernment machine. They assert that it costs more to make despotism safe than to make democracy safe.

Almost a third of the receipts of the Jugoslav state comes from indiect taxes, which are substantially increased. Direct taxes are also increased a little.

The Croats point to the new budget as fresh evidence of what they call the "financial fiasco" of the dictatorship. And they predict further finan-cial difficulties. In substantiation of their point of view, they point to Bul- Was Chapel Once; garia, where, after the overthrow of the people's government under Stam-bulisky and the advent of a military régime, the budget of the state was state's money is used. They predict that the receipts from the new budget will be employed more wisely than the money of the Jugoslav state has ever been used before.

New Zealanders Criticize Report on Civil Service

Findings as Regards Samoa Described as Being "Unfair and Ungenerous"

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR AUCKLAND, N. Z .- The recent report of a committee of New Zealand civil servants on the civil service of the mandated territory of Samoa has not gone unchallenged. The report Jugoslavia who complain of very made severe comments on some of heavy taxation, hoped for an appreciable tax reduction. This was one of the methods adopted in Samoa, and the chief reasons why many people expressed dissatisfaction with the welcomed the new regime. But in-stead of that, the budget has been ployed. The Government announced ployed. The Government announced that the committee's recommenda-tions would be adopted. But the report has in turn been severely criticized by J. D. Gray, retired Undersecretary for External Affairs, the department responsible for Samoa, and Gen. Sir George Richardson, who retired from the position of adminis-trator of the territory last year. Mr. Gray declares that New Zealand's prestige and honor as a mandatory power are injured by the Government's decision. "One finds it difficult," he says, "to write with restraint about the unfair and ungener ous comments and fault-finding about the Samoan Public Service, its personnel, staffing and conditions.

Sir George Richardson strongly supports his subordinates, who, he says, have endeavored to the utmost to maintain the good name of New Zealand, and in isolated cases where they have not done so their services have not been retained. Three years ago, says Sir George, the natives endum to be taken in Victoria in ago, says Sir George, the natives were being trained to administer their own affairs and were doing so very successfully. "If certain agitators had not deliberately lied to the natives, deceived them and maliciously influenced one section of the chiefs against other chiefs, and so created the dissension which has temporarily destroyed Samoa's progress, the position today would be very different. PECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR work, the Communist cause is growing weaker, and in some cases ceases to present any actual menace.

Of the three states, Austria, Hungary and Czechoslovakia, the former is the one in which Communism has least power. #### OREGON NINE WINS FROM IDAHO, 5 TO 1

EUGENE, Ore.—Playing in drizzling EUGENE, Ore.—Playing in drizzling rain, which several times threatened to stop the game, the University of Oregon baseball team defeated the University of Idaho here Saturday, 5 to 1. The game lacked the brilliant plays that made the first contest between these teams interesting. W. R. Baker '29, pitching for Oregon, struck out nine men and allowed only two hits.

Oregon played consistent ball throughout, making only one error. Idaho erred five times, occasionally just when it was costly. An error in the fifth inning allowed K. F. Barnes '31 to stretch a two-base hit into a homer, scoring one man ahead of him.

It is against the West that Philadelphia expects its keenest opposition aside from the Yankees, and it has started off with a victory. The Verlege parting. victory. The Yankees, usually meeting little opposition from the West, have won their first two games against Yankees Start Hitting!

Out of a clear sky, the Yankees have started hitting! What that means to the average baseball fan cannot be mistaken. The Athletics can hit—of that there is no question. They also have pitching of the best type—the type that is most effective against left-handed batting such as the Yankees have. But when the Yankees are hitting, watch out! And in their two games against the White Sox they

In pitching, the Browns cannot be left out of the figuring with the best of them. Gray has been the most effective and when he faced the Athletics, Sunday and pitched a great losing game, the Browns had won four straight games. #### Danny Duck Gives His Mother a Present

By REBA MAHAN STEVENS

ANNY DUCK had six fluffy yellow brothers and sisters who lived with him in the low house beside the duck pend; but if you had asked Mother Brown Duck, when she was half-napning on the sunny bank, how many children she had, very likely she would have answered absent-mindedly, "One!" Because the six small brothers and sisters took so little of her time and attention that she was apt to forget them. But Danny Duck! Dear me, how could she ever over-look him for one single instant!

Not that Mother Brown Duck called him naughty. No indeed! She would never have permitted either herself or anyone else to call him naughty; but he was, she had to admit, very

Every morning when Mother Brown Duck lined her family up in an orderly row and taught them earnestly just what little ducks should and should not do, Danny sat quite still with his head tilted attentively to one side and a most angelic smile on his funny little face. But half an hour later he would very likely be found doing some one of the very things he had been taught not

A full hour every morning before Mother Brown Duck was ready to get the family up, Danny began squirming about, giving disturbing quacks of restlessness; when Mother Duck led the way, at last, to the feed yard for breakfast and six little ducks waddled behind her obediently Danny made all sorts of side trips into the weeds and bushes; and when finally, she had them one and all safely there, what should Danny do but go running about under the taller fowl, half upsetting many of them, and gobbling more grain than was necessary for any small duck. Later, when they went into the water and the six little brothers and sisters circled about their mother like tiny boats about a big ship, Danny swam swiftly out of hearing and made the most reckless dives after bits of weed and tempting morsels.

Yes, without a doubt, Danny was

There he was now-in the very middle of the pond. Just a moment ago when she had closed her eyes for a comfortable nap on the sunshiny bank he had been beside her. But Old Mr. Drake was with him and so Mother Brown Duck knew he was quite safe.

All the young ducks about the place had been taught that great respect was due Mr. Drake; but Danny had a way of making himself quite friendly with the stately old gentle-man. When the other small ducks planced timidly up at him in passing, Danny grinned good-naturedly. Perhaps that was the reason Mr. Drake liked Danny. ## American Founders Corporation

to be represented by

Allotment Certificates Convertible into Common Stock

The 6% Cumulative First Preferred Stock, Series D, (par value $50) is entitled to cumulative dividends at the rate of $3 per share per annum, when and as declared, payable quarterly on the first days of February, May, August and November; and is redeemable, in whole or in part, on any quarterly dividend date on 60 days' notice, at $52.50 per share plus accrued dividends.

For each Allotment Certificate outstanding there will be deposited with The Seaboard National Bank of The City of New York, Depositary, two shares (par $50 each) of 6% First Preferred Stock, Series D. The Preferred Stock will be delivered on or and after February 2, 1932, in exchange for any Allotment Certificates then outstanding. Allotment Certificates will be non-callable prior to that date.

TAX PROVISIONS: Dividends on the First Preferred Stock are not subject to the present normal Federal Income Tax. The Corporation will agree upon timely and appropriate request to refund to holders resident in the respective states the Pennsylvania personal property tax not exceeding 4 mills per annum, any California personal property tax not exceeding 5 mills per annum, or the Massachusetts Income Tax not exceeding 6% per annum on dividends derived from the Preferred Stock initially to be represented by Allotment Certificates.

Mr. Louis H. Seagrave, President of the Corporation, has summarized in part his letter to us as follows, copies of which will be furnished on request:

Conversion of Allotment Certificates: Each Allotment Certificate may be exchanged for one share of Common Stock of the Corporation at any time after June 10, 1929, and on or before February 1, 1932, on the following basis: through February 1, 1930, without additional payment; thereafter through February 1, 1931, upon payment of $15 per Allotment Certificate; thereafter through February 1, 1932, upon payment of $40 per Allotment Certificate.

The Allotment Certificates or other appropriate instruments will provide that the number of shares of Common Stock deliverable in exchange for Allotment Certificates will be adjusted in the event, after June 10, 1929, of combinations, split-ups, etc., of the Common Stock, declarations of stock dividends in excess of certain rates, or pro rata offerings of Common Stock to Common stockholders at less than the then current conversion price.

Company: American Founders Corporation is primarily a management, financing and holding organization for shares of investment companies, and supplies investment supervision to its affiliated investment companies: International Securities Corporation of America, Second International Securities Corporation, United States & British International Company, Ltd., and American & General Securities Corporation.

In addition, the Corporation's general portfolio is broadly diversified with over 300 separate investments in over 30 different countries. Upon completion of this financing, this general portfolio (exclusive of the substantial investments in the Class B Common Shares of affiliated companies), together with cash and call loans will be more than 150% of the total par value of Preferred Stocks then to be outstanding.

The combined resources of American Founders Corporation and its affiliated investment companies exceed $175,000,000.

Assets: The Corporation has no liabilities except current obligations in the ordinary course of business. Net assets after deducting such current obligations as shown by the Balance Sheet in the above mentioned letter, aggregate $69,258,796 or over 225% of the total par value of First Preferred Stock to be outstanding upon completion of this financing.

Equity: The Corporation's outstanding Common Stock, taken at current market quotations, represents an equity junior to the Preferred Stocks in excess of $160,000,000.

Earnings: Among the important items of revenue of American Founders Corporation are the fees received for services to affiliated companies, interest and dividends on its investments, and realized profits. Net income for the fiscal year ended November 30, 1928, after all expenses and taxes, plus 6% on the proceeds of this financing and on the net amount of capital funds raised since the end of such fiscal year, totaled $5,002,903 or 2.7 times the total annual dividend requirements on all First Preferred Stock to be outstanding upon completion of this financing.

A 10% Common Stock dividend has been declared payable on June 10, 1929, to Common stockholders of record May 31, 1929.

Price $99 Per Allotment Certificate

And Accrued Dividend

These Allotment Certificates are offered for delivery when, as and if issued and received by us and subject to the approval of Counsel. It is anticipated that delivery will be made on or about May 21, 1929.

This freshness of vision and directin the exhibition at the Art Institute. There is a great feeling for the outof-doors, and interiors and portraits are rather conspicuous by their absence. The sea and mountains, skies and clouds, colorful groups of people in the open, are favorite subjects.

Although the show is an interna-tional one, the preponderance of pictures are by American painters. There are 61 paintings by foreign artists, including British, Dutch, French, German, Hungarian, Japanese, Mexican, Portuguese, Rumanian and Swiss. The imported pictures were all invited, as European painters are not willing to take the risk of sending pictures long distances when there is a chance of their being refused. A good many of

Whole Industry Working at Capacity—Prices Firm -Pig Iron Quiet

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR NEW YORK—The peaks in the steel industry are constantly getting higher, and in fact loftier than ever before.

The general average for the steel industry as a whole is 101 per cent of capacity, with both the Bethlehem and United States Steel corporations going at a pace of 103 per cent.

The mills are therefore working at greater than full practical capacity, beyond which it will be impossible to advance.

The volume of incoming business is The volume of incoming business is not quite keeping up with the rate of production, specifications and shipments but the present momentum will carry the industry well through May and probably June with no slackening of consequence. It will take a sharp falling off the second half of the year to prevent 1928 being a record year from several standpoints.

April a Record Month

The unusually high earnings of the United States Steel Corporation during the first quarter were no surprise. The point of interest is that selling prices of steel are low, judged by prices over a period of years, and hence the enormous earnings came about through large volume of business and more economical methods of production. Steel ingot production figures for April will be announced today by the American Iron and Steel Institute and it is virtually certain that they will prove last month to have been a recrd high from standpoint of full nonth's output as well as daily rate. Pig iron production in April was the third largest in history on a daily output basis, according to a prelim-inary estimate by the steel trade jourover March in daily rate. The total production was 3,656,900 tons, or 121,900 tons daily, compared with 3,714,473 tons, or 119,822 tons daily, the pre-

The tightness of supply in semi-finished steel is still acute. About 10,-000 additional tons of ingots have been sold during the last 10 days, though until the last month this form of steel had not been marketed since 1922. Raw steel is the most scarce in the Chicago

Nonferrous Markets

The nonferrous metals as a class have been quiet but firm. Copper has been strengthening in tone, though refined copper is unchanged in price at 18c for domestic delivery and 18 30c c. 1. f. European ports. Standard copper was rising a little each day on the London Metal Exchange, while the London Metal Exchange, while scrap copper was rising slightly in this country. On Friday electrolytic copper advanced 10s, a ton at London. Tin prices have hovered just above the low point for the last six years. The world's visible supply of tin declined nearly 300 tons during April. American tin deliveries were about $500 tons, compared with a monthly average over the last three years of 6500 tons. This is a bullish development, offset, however, by Straits shipments of nearly 9000 tons in April, compared with a monthly average over the last three years of 7000 tons.

Lead has been fairly active and steady at 6.80c, East St. Louis, and 7c, New York. The undertone of the zinc market is weak. Prices are actually 6.55@6.60c, though some producers still cling to 6.80c. Business is extremely light.

Cause of Bumps in Trade Course Put Directly Up to Government

fiscal operations, if for no other reason, because its own revenues depend mainly upon the prosperity of business. In its own interest, therefore, the Government—the largest con-sumer in the world, the spender of $4,000,000,000 a year—should make appropriations, borrow money, spend money, pay debts, refund taxes and pass other fiscal measures only with due reference to economic conditions and the consequent probable effect on general welfare of the acts in

Through what agency the Government should act is an open question. We suggest that the responsibility be fixed on a Federal Budget Board, formed for the purpose. The first function of such a board would be to make reports of its findings concerning business conditions. The second function would be to advise the Government. The board would inform the President, Congress and the various departments, from time to time, of the probable existing conditions of taxes, tax rebates, refunding operations, foreign loans, interest rates, payment of public debts, increase of wages, construc- putting it back. tion of public works, and other fiscal

In executing those two functions the proposed board would perform a third, it would afford leadership to private business. At times that is not necessary; but at other times in-dividuals do not dare to act alone; are not even able to act alone. Each individual must first look out for his own interests; but, as things now are, there are times when each can safeguard his own interest only by following policies which are bad for business in general. If the Government should act under some such policy as we propose, that would change the situation so fundamentally that, as a rule, each individual, still acting for his own interests, would promote the interests

Executives Often in Quandary

Often it is a toss-up with executives whether to build a new factory at once or wait a while; whether to order supplies for one month or for several; whether to increase wages or continue on existing schedules; whether to produce for stock or only for current requirements; whether to declare extra dividends or accumulate larger surpluses. When such options exist, it would help executives to know which course the gen-eral situation calls for.

If they did know, they might act as wisely as the American Radiator Company has acted for many years. Basing its policy on information gathered for its own guidance, that company has regularly bought large supplies of pig iron when there were few buyers in the market, and when business in general needed the stimulus of larger orders. Thus the com-pany has helped producers to keep their furnaces in blast and their wage payments up, at times when reduction of wages would have made a bad sit-

And that is the chief way, as we ex plained in a previous article, in which consumers do obtain the needed money when times are good. The proposed policy calls, then, for less public spending at certain times and for more at other times for whatever is most needed, as determined by Congress in the usual way. Projects are already before Congress for national highways, inland waterways, parks, buildings, harbors, reforestation and reclamation of waste

Such projects could be so financed as to increase consumer buying throughout the country. Thus the Government could sustain business in time of special need, we have no operation with the states, undertakes means of knowing. We shall have to go slowly and find out. Possibly, as First of all, the Government should explained above, the very fact that business concerns know that the Government should business concerns know the concerns the Government should business concerns the Government should business concerns know that the Government should business concerns the Government should business concerns know that the Government should be sho ernment stands ready to increase consumer income promptly, if the need arises, will induce business concerns to increase their own capital expenditures at a sufficient rate to make additional Government expenditures unnecessary.

Would Stabilize Prices So, also, when prices start to shoot upward, the very fact that the Government has declared its purpose of preventing extreme fluctuations will help to achieve this purpose; for it will discourage that speculation in commodities which thrives on shifting prices, and encourage enterprises which thrive on, and tend to preserve, stable prices. To curb a rapid rise in prices, the restraining influence of the Government would usually be enough. If it were not enough, the new would not authorize additional expenditures for public works. Furthermore, it would oppose reduction effect on economic welfare, in view of in taxes, favor treasury surpluses, and take money out of circulation by borrowing it and retaining it until business indexes showed the need of

But how can we expect business men to favor further government control of business? We expect no such thing. The proposed policy gives the Government no new powers; it merely provides for the more intelligent use of its present powers.

The Government now has the sole power to levy federal taxes, expend money for public works, regulate the currency, impose duties, fix wages of its employees, borrow money for federal uses, and pay its debts.

In exercising these powers, the Government now acts one way or the other, with or without adequate guidance. Thus it affects business and will continue to do so.

Our policy means less interference with business; for it provides more accurate and more comprehensive business information, more promptly and more widely distributed.

Imagine what would happen if the United States Government announced its intention to use all its fiscal operations, as far as feasible, during the next 12 months, in order to achieve prosperity; and the further intention of basing its actions, not on opinions, but on facts.

Because of the widespread con viction that business would be good, nearly everybody, in his own in-terest, would so act as to make business good. The result, we feel sure, would be a marked advance in material well-being, but only with this

That the Federal Reserve Board refrain from interference with established business practices. That is the subject we shall consider next.

FREIGHT CARS OUT OF REPAIR and at the same time acquire wealth.

To what extent it would be necessary, under this plan, for the Government to make special expenditures

Class 1 railroads on April 15 had 142,174 freight cars in need of repair, or 6.4 per cent the number on line. This was an increase of 2636 cars over the total reported on April 1.

Obedience

The keynote of obedience in all times and for all ages of people is found in the Latin words ob, "toward," and audire, "to listen," which were combined to form the word obædire (later obedire), "to obey"; for if one does not hear or listen to the voice of authority, there can be no possible response.

To go back to the Old Testament, obedience may be regarded as per haps the fundamental virtue. Dis-obedience was the explanation of all of Israel's misfortunes. In the New Testament it is equally important, becoming an inmost part of each Christian's life. The word there, in fact, seems practically synonymou with acceptance and demonstration of the Christian religion. Obedience today signifies a willing submission to authority, or a ready compliance with known laws or rules or duties. Faith and understanding should be innate characteristics of obedience, supplemented by mutual respect of man for men, child for adult, or servant for master. Obedience is not servility or obsequious We accent the second syllable of o-be'-di-ence. Sound o as in obey e as in eve, i as in till, e as in recent. your obedience is come abroad

Later the brothers undertook the famous project of the building of Adelphi Terrace, in London. They acquired the lease of a charming property, on a hill slowing down to property, on a hill sloping down to the Thames. Then, in the face of an incredulous public, they erected a terrace against the hill, supported upon a series of arches and vaults, topping the whole by that imposing block of houses which has been so highly esteemed ever since. Adelphi it was named, that Greek word meaning brothers; and, appropri-ately, those little streets between the Terrace and the Strand took on the given names of the brothers. #### A Dawes Plan for Santo Domingo

AFTER three weeks of strenuous labor, Charles G. Dawes and his associate returned from Santo Domingo. As a result of their efforts, Horacio Vasquez, the President of the Dominican Republic, is in possession of a document of 190 pages containing recommendations for financial reform. Mr. Dawes was quietly asked to go to Santo Domingo upon this mission only two days before his office of Vice-President of the United States expired. The request came from President Vasquez through the intermediary of Sumner Welles, former American Commissioner to the Dominican Republic. The request was not "inspired" by the American State Department; in fact, the department apparently did not become aware of this unique mission until after it had been announced to the public.

Santo Domingo realizes that most of the financial reforms brought about in the Caribbean under the ægis of agents of the United States Government have been contingent upon new loans. And one of the objects of this latest Dawes plan is to bring about a reform of internal finance without the aid of foreign bankers. Mr. Dawes and his associates estimate that appropriations for the year 1929 exceed revenue by about $41,127,000. This sum is not, however, a current deficit, but represents accumulations of debts since 1924. An important reason for this deficit is, according to the commission, the absence of a central accounting system, an absence which makes it impossible for anyone to know the actual financial status of the Government. An even greater reason for the deficit, at which the commission hinted, is the political use of funds, especially in the field of public

In order to reduce this budget and to produce a surplus by 1930, the commission recommended reduction in government expenditures to $10,000,000 a year, and the sale to private enterprise of a number of public utilities now operated by the Government at a loss. In order to keep the financial condition of the country in the future sound, the commission proposed the enactment of a periodic budget, the executive control of expenditures, a proper system of budget accounting, adequate balance sheets and operating statements, and a law regulating projected public improvements. President Vasquez has already appointed a local Dominican as budget director.

In thus requesting aid from Mr. Dawes, President Vasquez has demonstrated considerable political shrewdness. From the personal standpoint, his term of office is rapidly coming to an end, and he wishes to make a good showing for the elections that will be held next year. It appears also that he has the wholly patriotic purpose of freeing his country from outside financial control. On Feb. 8, 1907, Santo Domingo signed a treaty which authorized the President of the United States to appoint a receiver of Dominican customs. This convention was amended on Dec. 27, 1924. Santo Domingo cannot increase its public debt without the consent of the United States. The failure of Santo Domingo to observe this condition was one of the reasons that led the United States to establish a military occupation in Santo Domingo in 1916—a rule which was terminated only in 1924.

As soon as the Dominican Government pays off the principal on its present bonded indebtedness the United States receivership will be withdrawn. And it is in order to facilitate this aim that President Vasquez is attempting to increase local revenue. In an address made upon arriving in Santo Domingo City, Mr. Dawes declared: "President Vasquez has expressed to us his determined purpose to rid this Republic of the last vestige of foreign interference in its domestic affairs by bringing about that economic management of the Government's business which will furnish funds to pay the Dominican debt and relieve this Republic from the control of its customs by outsiders."

Santo Domingo's desire to become free from outside financial control is wholly laudable. Whether the budget plan worked out by the Dawes commission will succeed in its objective remains to be seen. A plan which may prove successful in the United States may not necessarily work smoothly in a more primitive country. It is comparatively easy to work out a financial scheme on paper; the real test will come in the experience and integrity of the officials who attempt to apply it. Santo Domingo is on trial. If it succeeds in putting its financial house in order, the United States will welcome the opportunity to withdraw the receivership. And Santo Domingo's example will prove an inspiration to Haiti and Nicaragua, where similar receiverships are also maintained.

Railroad Holding Companies

TT IS a development of recent years, even months, for financiers interested in rail securities and management to organize, as a part of the financial structure, holding companies to finance the new agencies of transport in which various railroads are preparing to engage. Such organizations have recently been formed by the Pennsylvania Railroad, with the Pennroad Corporation, which will be wholly independent of the railroad; and by the Van Sweringens, with their Alleghany Corporation, | century, depends upon individual patrons. The | tan Island-not just yet!

while the Chesapeake Corporation includes in its ownership security holders in the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway.

The announced purpose of the Pennsylvania's new company is to establish transportation lines by water, air and highway-activities which are somewhat beyond the scope of actual rail operations but which tie closely into a railroad's business and which many rail lines now find desirable and even essential adjuncts. The Pennroad Corporation may therefore be regarded as more in the capacity of an independent operator of trucks, buses, airplanes and ships while the others, generally speaking, are more in the nature of investment trusts, usually with adequate powers to permit of their developing and engaging in other forms of transport if desired.

It is a new field for railroads and rail managements-one which has developed so suddenly that public sentiment has not crystallized as to the status of these holding companies. That they are beyond the pale of the Interstate Commerce Commission is by no means certain although even that, in itself, would not necessarily be an indictment of their motives, for they may serve solely as an investment medium and perform a needed service.

The holding companies organized as independent or component parts of rail managements present a new phase in corporate finance, one which undoubtedly will receive public attention should they step beyond the bounds of an investment trust, as such.

"The Living Constitution"

AT A time when constitutional laws and constitutional liberties are commanding marked public interest, Prof. T. R. Powell's recent address at Bowdoin College on the United States Constitution as a living and flexible document represents a valuable contribution to this subject. Professor Powell submits that the American Constitution, far from being a fixed and unchanging instrument of government, is undergoing continuous change, and that "in this continuous process of development we face a striking contrast to the notion that the fathers established the Constitution once and for all and that we have but to bow before the will of the framers and exercise no will of our own.

Notwithstanding the steady adjustment of the Constitution to the requirements of a progressive nation, the really remarkable fact is not that the Constitution has undergone so many fundamental changes, but that it has undergone so few since its adoption nearly 142 years ago. Drawn out of many sessions of discussion and dissension, and signed with grave misgivings, the Constitution of Sept. 17, 1787, nevertheless brought into being a union which has endured and progressed beyond the fondest hopes of its

The varied alterations which have marked the application of this Constitution to the practical exigencies of government have necessitated in all only nine amendments since the first Congress submitted in 1789 its ten original amendments known and cherished today as the Bill of Rights. As a matter of fact, for more than a century, from 1804 to 1913, only three amendments were added to the Constitution, these growing out of the extenuating circumstances of the Civil War, and as a result many historians and commentators were claiming that the Constitution had become so rigid as to be almost unamendable. In seven years, however, from 1913 to 1920, four amendments were enacted in rapid succession, providing a federal income tax, direct election of senators, national prohibition and woman suffrage.

History clearly reveals that the mechanism of amendment has always yielded to a really sustained and widespread public demand, and the Constitution today is and should be an amendable instrument, subject to wise alterations. In recent years the United States has more and more become a national entity, and the problems affecting one state have become more common to others. The result of this trend is the necessity of the states' meeting these problems with national legislation and with united effectiveness.

The sentiment toward the United States Constitution expressed by Prof. Howard Lee McBain of Columbia University, in his book, "The Living Constitution," should commend itself to all American citizens: "It is not to be worshiped. But it is certainly to be respected."

A Royal Academy Banquet

NCE a year at the height of the London season occurs the high ceremonial function of the Royal Academy banquet. Among the distinguished guests on this occasion it is usual to find a representative of the royal family and many highly placed persons such as the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Chief Justice, the First Lord of the Admiralty, and other ministers and dignitaries of church and state. The toasts include the royal family, the armed forces of the Crown, and His Majesty's ministers, and in recent years a concession has been made to a sister art by including the toast of literature. According to custom the speeches turn more upon the affairs of the army, the navy and the air forces, and civilian affairs of state than upon matters relating to the arts.

From time to time English critics have pointed out that the ceremony of this banquet expresses almost too well the character of the Royal Academy. They suggest that it has become a sort of state institution with merits and defects rooted in custom and tradition; and that it turns for support to those who represent the hallowed convention of the British constitution. Such critics have not hesitated to say that the banquet, taking its cue from the academy itself, inclines to be a social rather than an artistic function; to ally itself with formality, etiquette, and polished manners rather than with the originative energy of progressive art. They go on to ask how a body so rooted can provide any stimulus to the young and the enterprising. There are obvious reasons why the standardized art of the Royal Academy should seek allies whom modern literature does not attempt to enlist. One of these is that the painter of today, like a poet in the eighteenth book which an author writes is multiplied by the printing press and may reach a million readers. The picture which a painter paints is unique, and is destined generally to grace a wall in the home of a single owner. In all countries the painter's art is still, to a considerable extent, at the mercy of the fashionable few, and the fashionable few, seeking security, are apt to approve what is correct and established.

More democratic influences, however, are knocking at the door. Better methods of reproduction have made excellent prints available for the many. Poster art is assuming a new and far more dignified place in cultivated and popular estimation. In the future there will doubtless be many more public galleries where contemporary art as well as old masters will be on exhibition. With wider dissemination of taste there is more scope for originality. Progressive influences have lately been making themselves felt even in the Royal Academy, which is already becoming somewhat more friendly to the experiments of the younger

To Supervise Communications

THE bill introduced by Senator Couzens for the establishment of a General Communications Commission to deal with the transmission of messages or news over wires, by radio, or otherwise, as the Interstate Commerce Commission deals with the transportation of freight and passengers, opens an interesting speculation. Hearings are to be held before the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate, beginning probably this week. It is, of course, no part of the Senator's purpose, as we understand it, to attempt any sort of interference with the character of communications to be carried, or to set up in the remotest degree anything resembling a censorship of news. But the enormous development of radio communication, and the plans for its further utilization, as well as the present state of the telephone and telegraph lines, justify the existence of some governmental body that may protect the interests of the public. Both wire and wireless systems of communication lend themselves readily to combination and monopoly. Presumably in the hearings evidence of this tendency will be brought out, and propositions for combating it be outlined.

Quite as much as a national commission of this sort, some such regulatory body should be established for international communications. A world conference on international communications was held years ago, and the State Department of the United States has taken an interest in the topic. It is obviously one that can only be handled by international agreement, and could be most readily and expeditiously disposed of through the machinery of the League of Nations. It might indeed suggest a topic for one of those League activities in which the United States is coming more and more to participate.

The Man Who Has No Last Name

THE title may be challenged, of course, for many will protest that even "Oscar of the Waldorf" must own a surname. Indeed, a person of sufficient curiosity and perseverance may unearth it, identifying it as Tschirky. But what has he then accomplished for all his pains? Oscar has needed no last name for thirty-six years. One wonders whether he himself may not have mislaid it.

Perhaps he was not precisely the host of the Waldorf-Astoria, this stalwart native of Switzerland. Officially, his position has been that of manager of the hotel's restaurants; yet in his manner he has contri tremendously more. He did not emerge from the stately portals and assist his patrons to alight from their broughams, neither did he personally serve them with the delicacies of his table. Nevertheless, his presence was felt. One could not see him move along Peacock Alley and up those marble steps to his office on the mezzanine floor, step confident, shoulders squared, head thrown back, without an assurance that he held all the reins grasped firmly in his capable fingers.

In some inexplicable way, Oscar and the Waldorf have become interchangeable terms; one cannot think of the hotel without reference to the man. It was he who first opened wide the doors, at six of an evening in 1893; it was he who closed them just the other day, with a gesture at once firm yet reassuring. If anyone can reproduce the traditional flavor and prestige of the Waldorf, one of the best loved hotels of the world, in another building and upon another site, it will be Oscar. One's expectation reaches out eagerly to that new Waldorf with Oscar serenely at its helm.

Those Canadians who have questioned the wisdom of Canada having appointed her own representatives to foreign lands, on the ground that such course might weaken the ties connecting the Dominion with the motherland, should be relieved by a statement recently made by the British Minister for the Colonies, to the effect that the plan was working out well. #### Today in Spain

By SISLEY HUDDLESTON

Following is the first of a series of six articles which will appear intermittently, discussing the Dictatorship of Primo de Rivera and the causes and effects of the recently reported uprisings. Mr. Huddleston has lately returned from Spain, where he gathered first-hand material for his articles

THERE is one thing that Europe knows well how ! to do: travel comfortably, for traveling is as comfortable and even as luxurious as it can be made. From Paris to Madrid is a twenty-four-hour journey, yet it is not wearisome. The Sud Express is a remarkable train, smooth running, and filled with every possible convenience. You step aboard to your appointed compartment in the evening, go to bed, and wake up near the Spanish frontier where you breakfast before you are transferred at Irun to the Spanish

When I went to Madrid this springtide it was my purpose to ascertain how the country stood after more than live years of dictatorship. Spain is a land of mystery, and in nothing has it been more mysterious than in its attitude toward Primo de Rivera. In the newspapers there are accounts of army rebellion and student rioting; and communiqué after communiqué from the Government, assuring us that nothing is happening, only arouses our curiosity. Methinks he doth protest too much! Such volubility of optimism seems to betoken misgiving. The more the Marqués de Estella informs us that he means to stay, the more we believe that he is about to resign.

Besides, there is an evocation in the name of Spain. We imagine that political changes there must somehow be accompanied by violence. The sulkiness of artillery officers and the uproariousness of students are at once magnified into a revolution. My old servant was even alarmed for my safety. She pictured Madrid as a howling mob with knives and rifles; with tramcars overturned to form barricades; with machine guns crackling from burning buildings. I was plunging headlong into multitudinous

The facts are altogether different. It is strange how distorted are the pictures painted by some press reports and the imagination. Even were Spain passing through a revolutionary period, I doubt whether it would be visible to the naked eye. Revolutions are, of course, scattered incidents; generally things go on for the ordinary citizen without particular excitement, and sometimes without particular knowledge of what is happening round the corner.

Somewhere I have read an eyewitness's account of the battle of Waterloo. He found himself solitary in a dismal plain. It rained pitilessly. Somebody told him to march in a certain direction. He trudged through mud. Here and there was a hurry of men. He continued to trudge through mud. There was a vague sound of guns. Then there was more hurrying of men. . . . I will cut the narrative short; but finally the spectator was informed by a fugitive that he had been present at the battle of Waterloo. . . .

That, I suspect, is about all that the individual usually sees of great historic events. So that, even supposing Spain to be in what is described as a state of upheaval, I might at the best hope to witness a street row, and to hear a bullet whistle by my window while I was quietly dining.

As it is, I can report no spectacle as unusual as a street row, and no bullet whistled past my window. Let me say at the outset that nobody who intends to visit the international exhibitions of Barcelona and Seville this year should be deterred by the impression of uncertainty that has been produced by recent happenings. Everything is calm on the Spanish front, and whether Primo de Rivera goes or stays is a purely political matter, which is unlikely to have immediate effects.

The fact is that Spain is the least known of European countries. To the American and the English traveler Spain is off the beaten track. France and Germany and Italy and Holland and Switzerland are, to the man of average education, lands which, though unvisited, are understood. When he at last finds himself in these countries he is almost surprised to discover that the impressions which he had formed from reading correspond to the impressions he receives by seeing. But of Spain he has only fantastic notions. He vaguely thinks of the Inquisition, the Grand Armada, the Conquest of Granada. The association of ideas extends to Miguel de Cervantes and Don Quixote, to George Borrow and his Bible, to bullfights and mantillas-and to Primo de Rivera.

When Louis XIV tried to effect the union of France and Spain by placing his grandson on the Castilian throne, he exclaimed: "Il n'y a plus de Pyrénées!" The Pyrences no longer existed for him. The Spanish Ambas-sador grandiloquently replied that this range of mountains had melted like snow in the rays of the Sun-King. They were both mistaken. The Pyrenees, though they are now easily crossed by the railway, constitute a barrier that separates Spain from Europe.

On my present travels I was deeply conscious of this separation. It came to me in divers ways. I had wandered in the space of a few weeks in nearly every country of western Europe, and had pushed far to the east; and always had I felt at home. There were strange sights, but there were no mysteries. But now I was aware—as I had been aware on earlier visits—of a civilization that is somewhat alien. The feeling can be summed up in the assertion that, despite geography, Spain is not in Europe but in Africa.

The phrase is not original. I thought it was when I jotted it down in my notebook. But, like most travelers, I carry with me in my baggage a small library concerni the cities in which I expect to stay; and when at night! opened my valise, the first book I read told me epigrammatically that Spain is not a European but an African country. It is hard to say anything new nowadays! I can only console myself with the reflection that my sensibility to differences is not less acute than that of my predecessors. Moreover, I am comforted by the corroboration. If it be true that Spain has features which remind one of northern Africa, then it would have been inexplicable that others had not observed the fact before me.

A diplomatist with whom I dined in Madrid remarked upon the Moorish character of Spain rather wittily. "Mr. Ford tells us that history is bunk," he said, "and he right. For, according to history, the Moorish invaders were finally driven from Spain by the end of the fifteenth century. You can see for yourself that this is not exact. They have never been driven from Spain. Here is their architecture and their character; and, still more important in its ultimate consequences, here is their country-desert

But I anticipate. Before we reached the frontier I was approached by a Spanish professor. "We lunched together," he said, "you may remember, before the days of Primo de Rivera, when King Alfonso XIII made one of his sojourns in Paris, at the Spanish Embassy. The Ambassador then, as now, was Señor Quinones de Léon.'

I remembered. The Embassy had been removed, and the occasion was the housewarming. The Ambassador had taken me aside to explain that the King himself, who prides himself on being a draftsman, had designed the garden and pergola. He had likewise sent from the royal palace a number of magnificent pictures which hung upon the walls of the Embassy in Paris.

"Times have changed," said the professor: "I am now more or less in exile—voluntarily—and I am to meet some relatives on the border. The system is altogether bad. There has been blunder after blunder committed. Oddly enough, my sympathies are with Primo de Rivera against the army officers who would impose their will upon the Government. But, generally, the dictatorship is a yoke under which Spain groans, and which it intends soon to throw off. Certainly the former method of rotation—the alternation of liberally inclined Conservatives and conservatively inclined Liberals-together with extreme Socialist and Syndicalist action-was producing little good.

"Yet the game of ins and outs is practiced in most Parliamentary countries, and Parliament was not suppressed because of the rotation of parties. No, it was suppressed because at last Labor and Liberal thought was becoming too advanced. Real reforms were recommended and would have been put into operation had not Primo de Rivera, with whom the King has compromised himself, made his reactionary coup. Progress has been retarded, not accelerated."

The train stopped. The professor got out. Was he right or wrong? That was the question which I was to endeavor tc answer in Spain itself.

From the World's Great Capitals-Rome

IN THE course of his speech to the first Quinquennial Assembly of the Régime, Signor Mussolini stated that since he became head of the Italian Government he had given "over 60,000 audiences and had interested himself in 1,887,112 petitions addressed by private individuals to his secretariat directly." There is surely some error in these figures. Certainly no doubts will be entertained to the fact that since Oct. 30, 1922, when he was installed as Prime Minister of Italy, Benito Mussolini has given 60,000 audiences; that would make an average of twenty five persons received daily by the Duce. As regards, how the number of petitions, there is obviously a serious mistake. Even if the Duce had spent a twelve-hour day doing nothing else but examining these petitions, he would have had to settle them at the rate of about one a minute. However that may be, there is no doubt that Signor Mussolini is an indefatigable worker and that he never puts off till tomorrow what he should do today.

The inaugural sitting of the new Italian Parliament will take place in the beautiful hall of the Palazzo Montecitorio-the lower House-which is considerably larger than that of the Palazzo Madama-the Senate. The Government's benches and the rostrum on which is placed the Speaker's chair have been temporarily removed and a royal throne erected in their place. The Queen and the royal princesses will follow the ceremony from the court gallery, while the heir to the throne and the other royal princes will occupy seats near the King's throne. The ceremony, though less spectacular than that of the inauguration of a British Parliament, is none the less impressive. There will be a royal procession from the Quirinal Palace to the Palazzo Montecitorio, and the old state coaches will again make their appearances in the streets Rome. After the King has delivered his speech from the throne, the Premier will read out the names of all the deputies in alphabetical order, and each member in turn will take the oath of allegiance to the state. 1 1 1

After prolonged negotiations with the Austrian Government Italy has succeeded in regaining possession of the famous Codex known as "Tavole Amalfitane," or the medieval maritime code which was enforced in the Mediterranean until the beginning of the seventeenth century. This precious document is called the "Capitula et Ordinationes Curiae Marittimae Nobilis Civitatis Amalphae." In the ninth century the Republic of Amalfi, in the south of Italy, acquired great importance as a naval power, and her maritime traffic with the east was as prosperous as that of Genoa and Venice. Even after the destruction of the Republic of Amalfi by Pisa in the twelfth century the maritime code or "Tavole Amalfitane" continued to be observed in a general way, and there are still several documents extant which show that the sale and purchase of ships in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries were regulated by the maritime law of Amalfi. The Codex, which had remained in possession of an Amalfitan family until the fifteenth century, fell into the hands of the Foscarini family of Venice and was finally sold to the Hapsburgs with other documents in 1700. The document was discovered in 1844 in the Palatine Library of Vienna among the papers of the Doge Marco Foscarini.

The Royal Italian University for Foreigners at Perugia, founded by the Italian Government four years ago to make Italy better known to students of foreign nationality, I Italian art will be opened again this year for a summer session from July to October. In the program of this year's session are included, among other subjects, special courses in the history of Italian institutions, Italian literature, the history of art, Italian history and Italian thought throughout the centuries. Foreign students are admitted to these courses without any formalities as to previous studies, and are entitled to special privileges in regard to accommodation, railroad fares, passports, etc., besides being given free entrance to picture galleries and museums An elementary course leads up to a certificate of proficiency in the Italian language and an advanced course to a diploma qualifying the holder to teach Italian in foreign countries. The inauguration of this year's summer course will take place on June 30 when Giuseppe Belluzzo, the Minister of Education, will give an inaugural address. As in former years, excursions will be organized to several towns in the neighborhood.

The Fascist Government has revised the 1909 law for the protection of Italy's artistic treasures, introducing many important amendments aiming at the better protection and preservation of the immense art heritage in possession of private individuals. The new bill gives power to the state to carry out all necessary repairs, at the expense of the proprietor, to any monumental or historic building, when the latter has negligently allowed it to fall into bad condition, as well as to expropriate the building in the event of his inability or unwillingness to pay the cost of these repairs. Moreover, the State has authority to prohibit the dispersal of any collection of artistic and historical value, and the state's rights for any antiquities lying below ground is recognized in the new bill. One of the new clauses strictly forbids the placing of posters or advertisements on monuments or historical buildings.

According to the latest statistics, Milan is the largest city in Italy. Its population, which in January, 1927, was 894,715, rose in October, 1928, to 942,114, thus surpassing for the first time by nearly 2000 inhabitants the population of Naples. Milan, however, will not enjoy for long this position, and it is anticipated that Naples will shortly become once more the most populated Italian city. The growth in Milan's population is not due to a high birth rate, but to immigration from rural districts, and now that the "back-to-the-land" movement is to be strictly enforced, Milan is bound to cede to Naples the honor of being the biggest city in Italy. The population of the other most important Italian cities in October, 1928, was the following: Naples, 940,133; Rome, 870,571; Genoa, 612,035; Turin, 570,900; Florence, 275,379; Venice, 255,-316, and Bologna 241,806.

In their effort to make the whole of Italy reflect the new ideas emanating from Fascism, Fascist leaders have not neglected the fine arts. Augusto Turati, the secretary of the Fascist Party, has offered the sum of 50,000 lire for the best work in painting or sculpture illustrating Fascist personalities or events, which will be shown at the Venice Biennial Exhibition next year. The action of Signor Turati has been appreciated in many quarters, but one wonders if it will succeed in establishing a real Fascist school of painting, or at least in improving the standard of Italy's present artistic production. The Italian pavilion of next year's exhibition in Venice will no doubt show how much progress, if any, will have been made in
